2. Bio

Specialisations

- Higher education, including policy and system organization
- International and comparative higher education, in the context of globalisation
- International students, international and intercultural education
- Educational and social theory

Professor Simon Marginson is Professor of International Higher Education at the UCL Institute of Education, University of London, UK. He is also Director of the ESRC/HEFCE Centre for Global Higher Education, based at the Institute. He was Professor of Higher Education in the Centre for the Study of Higher Education (CSHE) at the University of Melbourne, Australia, from July 2006 until October 2013, and is now an Honorary Professorial Fellow of the University of Melbourne CSHE. Simon Marginson is Editor-in-Chief of Higher Education. He specializes primarily in higher education, and comparative and international education in the context of globalization, being one of the world's most highly cited social science researchers in these fields. In 2014 he was the Clark Kerr Lecturer on higher education at the University of California.

Academic career: For the first 15 years of his professional career Simon was policy research officer for the unions representing tertiary students, school teachers, and academic staff in higher education in Australia. He was Senior Lecturer and later Associate Professor/Reader at the Centre for the Study of Higher Education at the University of Melbourne (1993-1998). He completed a PhD in the Faculty of Education in 1996 and was awarded the Chancellor's Prize for the outstanding thesis in the social sciences, arts and humanities. He joined the Monash University Faculty of Education as Reader in 1998 and was appointed to a Personal Chair in 2000, directing the Monash Centre for Research in International Education 1999-2006, and editing the Australian Journal of Education from 2000-2005. In 2002 Simon was awarded an Australian Research Council (ARC) Professorial Fellowship. He returned to the University of Melbourne Centre for the Study of Higher Education as Professor of Higher Education in July 2006. In 2011 he became one of the Co-ordinating Editors of Higher Education, in 2013 he became joint Editor-in-Chief with Jussi Valimaa from Finland and in 2017 sole Editor-in-Chief. Between 1995 and 2013, Simon held continuous Australian Research Council (ARC) large grants for basic research. In Australia he was awarded over £1.1 million in national competitive grants and £1.8 million in all research project funding. On 28 October 2013 Simon became Professor of International Higher Education at the UCL Institute of Education (IOE) at University College London. In July 2014 he was elected to Academia Europaea. In February 2015 the UK Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) awarded £4.9 million to establish a Centre for Global Higher Education (CGHE) led by Simon Marginson: in November 2017 the Centre included five UK and eight international partner universities, 16 projects and 35 collaborative researchers. In November 2017 he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Social Sciences from Lingnan University in Hong Kong SAR. In April 2018 he was conferred as a Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences in the UK. In September 2018 Simon takes up an appointment as Professor of Higher Education in the Department of Education at the University of Oxford in the UK.

Scholarship: Simon works in political economy and sociology while drawing on history and political and social theory. He moves between observation-based qualitative research (mostly using semi-structured interviews and contextualized case studies) and conceptual inquiry. He is working on a series of books and papers designed to theorize, synthesize and explain higher education, especially its global dimension. Currently he is working on (a) a comparative study of national approaches to higher education and public good, (b) similarities and differences between Sinic and Anglo-American political cultures and the manifestations and potentials in higher education and research, (c) the consequences of and responses to Brexit in UK higher education, (d) international education and migration policy, (e) synthetic theorisations of 'Higher education', and 'Higher education and globalization'.

Ideas: Simon Marginson has developed new concepts, and applications of concepts, that have been taken up more broadly in higher education studies. These include the 'glonacal' (global/national/local) positionality of agency in higher education published with Gary Rhoades in 2002; the 'Post-Confucian Model' of higher education in 2011 developed to explain the dynamism of higher education and science in East Asia; and the notion of higher education as a process of 'self-formation', combining economic and non-economic practices, first published in relation to international education in 2014. His application of Fred Hirsch's (1976) theorisation of positional competition to education, including global competition; his adaptation for higher education of the notion of global public goods developed by the UNDP (Kaul, et al., 1999); and the notion of international student security (2010) developed with Chris Nyland, drawing on the UNDP concept of human security, have also entered the literature.

Principal books: In the 1990s Simon worked primarily on problems of national policy, education as a positional good, new public management reform and market relations in education, publishing Education and Public Policy in Australia (1993), Markets in Education (1997), Educating Australia (1997), and The Enterprise University (with Mark Considine, 2000). In 1998 he began to work on globalisation and higher education, culminating in International Student Security with Chris Nyland, Erlenawati Sawir and Helen Forbes-Mewett (2010); Creativity in the Global Knowledge Economy (2009), Global Creation (2010) and Imagination (2010) with Peter Murphy and Michael Peters; Higher Education in the Asia-Pacific (2011, with Sarjit Kaur and Erlenawati Sawir); and The Handbook on Higher Education and Globalization (2011, Roger King and Rajani Naidoo). His Clark Lectures on US higher education were published as The Dream is Over: The crisis of Clark Kerr's California Idea of higher education (2016) and he has also published Higher Education and the Common Good (2016) on higher education, social inequality and public goods. Four books have been translated into Chinese. His more than 300 journal articles, review essays and chapters include papers in Comparative Education Review, Educational Theory, Thesis Eleven, Cambridge Journal of Economics, Cambridge Journal of Education, Higher Education, Journal of Higher Education, Studies in Higher Education, Frontiers of Education in China, Peking Education Review.

Other activities: Simon contributes to community, industry and professional organisations and is a regular public and media commentator on higher education. He has prepared many policy studies and reports, for eight national governments, OECD and the European Commission. He is a Board Member of the Consortium of Higher Education Researchers in Europe, a member of El Seminario de Educacion Superior de la Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico, has an advisory role in the Peking University Graduate School of Education, and is active in the Association for Studies in Higher Education in the United States. He currently serves on the Advisory Committee of the Academic Ranking of World Universities at Shanghai Jiao Tong University in China. From November 2017, he is Co-Chair of the UK Parliament-based Higher Education Commission's Inquiry into the Education Export industry in the UK.
