

Higher education in Ukraine: past overview, present state and future perspectives

31 January 2023

00:39:50 Ali Alrubian: I have a question about the link of HE with the labor market, there are many factors that affect in the market sector, and how is the Ukrainian system overcome this interlinks factor?

You are talking about the quality of the HE system what about the HE programs, how it has been designed, and the priorities at the level of the HE system?

00:46:28 Simon Marginson: Colleagues it is time now to think about your questions for Nadiya. Post your question or comment in the Chat - that way we can invite you into the Q&A part of our webinar!

00:52:37 Mike Ratcliffe: The damage to the country's HE system is awful. We are all devastated for the Ukrainian people. My question is mundane in comparison to this terrible situation. The global league tables are a poor proxy for quality, but in addition to the staff and student mobility challenges, I imagine that the concentration of research in the academies would be a constraint on success?

00:59:56 Nicholas Hillman: Thank you for a fascinating talk about the horrors of war. It is so sad to see the devastation and to hear the human stories behind that.

Were you surprised by the slavish response of the Rectors of Russian universities, given their support for the war, to the situation in Ukraine?

01:01:02 Charito Pizarro: Thank you for your very informative presentation, Nadiya. It's an understatement to say that your people are extraordinary. UA

01:02:35 Aliya Sarsenbayeva: Nadiya, thank you for presentation! I hope the war will finish soon and the country will reconstruct all universities and HE. I have a question about students' voice: Do/did they participate in curriculum design? If yes, how? Thank you for the answer!

01:02:39 Nataliya Rumyantseva: Thank you very much Nadia for sharing an overview of the higher education system in Ukraine. A very timely contribution.

Could I take this opportunity to invite all colleagues interested in researching higher education in Ukraine to create an interest group, a space where all members could brainstorm ideas for useful research projects and share experience/literature? I'd be happy to coordinate your responses if you want to email me at rn32@gre.ac.uk. Or if you are aware of such a space, please invite me! :)

Many thanks, Nataliya

01:10:46 Marine Chitashvili: Thank you for very informative presentation. Please, accept full support from us to you and your country. My question is very simple as I understand Ukraine steel keeps two doctorates. PhD and doctor of science. Are there any restrictions for PhD to take the academic positions associate professor and professor.
