

Biographical narratives of African post-doctoral fellows in a global academy - Webinar 1: African research and the global science system series

24 November 2022

- 00:35:28 Kozara Oyalowo: Will this be shared after the meeting?
- 00:37:17 CGHE Webinars: If Otilia is happy to share the document we will share it after the webinar.
- 00:42:32 CGHE Webinars: If you have any questions for Otilia, please post them in the chat.
- 00:53:24 David Mills: Thank you Otilia - this is really important work. I wanted to ask you about attitudes to these postdocs amongst African HE institutions?
- 00:58:20 Jacob Nkansah: Thank you for sharing with us. I wanted to ask you about the success stories of these post doc fellows. Did your study consider that?
- 01:01:38 Adamseged Abebe: Thank you, I have question regarding the notion of social status, especially if there is differences between African post docs vs non African contexts like the UK for example, perhaps I can articulate it better in voice
- 01:05:36 Alois S Baleni: Thank you so much Dr this is so much an interesting intervention, very neglected. I cannot agree any less. I have a clarity seeking question if you were only looking at international postdocs? The experiences of local postdocs in my view are also a neglected
